

New Employee Onboarding Guide

1. Equipment

New employees receive their laptop and other required equipment on their first working day. IT will contact you before your start date to confirm your equipment preferences.

2. Training

Onboarding training takes place during the first two weeks of employment and covers company policies, tools, and role-specific training with your team lead.

3. Probation Period

All new employees are subject to a 90-day probation period, with a formal review conducted by the manager at the end of the period.

4. Key Contacts

Your HR business partner and manager will be introduced during your first week and are your first points of contact for any onboarding questions.